So, it's a good trade-off and one deserves your overall praise for this initial release of Share for Review. It is fully functional for now, though a few bugs remain as you mentioned. Yes, for me this new feature will be most useful for collaboration. I don't have the luxury of a multi-computer setup. I want to have my card ready to go when inspiration strikes. And don't want to mess with files during the TELEPHOTO experience...My wallet needs this feature..i've used this feature with my ipad, but this feature must be built into the desktop version..the desktop version is faster. Well, as I stated in the review, this feature is currently only working for reviewers (with a valid Share for Review feature), not for consumers. When we release the final version of Share for Review, we will enable readers to post feedback about existing images. So if you run into any issues or bugs, make sure to let us know so we can get them fixed. Nikon says you can not edit the JPEG preview since it load in advance of the original DNG, and the RAW data. I suppose for a digital photographer you should be able to crop DNG and write to DNG then crop RAW and write to DNG if you don't save out the RAW.
